New Titles for Children and Young People.

Esmeline is a small Seneca girl living with her parents and two younger brothers on a farm in northeastern Oklahoma. In this story of one year in her life the author has given a good picture of modern Indian life with its blending of the old and the new. The story is slight and the high price will limit the book to large collections or those that have a great need for Indian materials.

A brief but effective summary of all phases of railroading with the emphasis on its vocational aspects. Beginning with a brief history of the development of railroads in the United States the author then gives details of railroad construction, operation, and maintenance. The style is easy enough for fifth and sixth grade readers and interesting enough for older readers.

Clear detailed drawings add to the effectiveness of the book.

Two children prepare, plant, and cultivate their garden through an entire season from spring through fall. The text makes pleasant reading although most gardeners will question the statements that moles are helpful and lady bugs should be killed. There is not enough factual information to make the book useful for young gardeners nor enough story to give it appeal for pleasure reading. Illustrations are highly stylized and lacking in charm. Not recommended.

Brown, Vinson. Black treasure; drawings by Lester Peterson. Little, 1951. 214p. $2.50

A melodramatic story of treasure hunting in the Panamanian jungles. Two young men go into a wild section that is supposed to be haunted and that is also supposed to be the hiding place of an ancient treasure trove. One of the men loses his legs and the other almost loses his life as they battle wild beasts and insane men. The author has attempted to combine lessons in conservation with high adventure and has not been entirely successful with either. Uneven writing that is highly poetic in spots and quite labored in others. Not recommended.
Slight but amusing story of the rabbit in the magician's hat. "Gabbit" decided it was time someone surprised the magician for a change so he did it by sending up an old mitten, a cat, a teddy bear, before he popped out of the hat as he was supposed to. The act was so popular the magician had to increase his tent to three times its original size. Unfortunately the story bogs down at the end to an extent that nullifies the appeal of the surprise element of the first part. Cartoon like drawings appropriate to the story but lacking in quality and appeal. Board binding. Not recommended.

Coombs, Charles I. Young readers mystery stories; illus. by Charles Geer. Lantern pr., 1951. 192p. $2.50

Mediocre collection of mystery stories ranging from counterfeiting to the capture of a spy ring. The situations are within the realm of plausibility but solutions are too dependent on coincidence to be realistic. Characters are poorly drawn and unconvincing. Not recommended.

Corrigan, Maribelle. The first book of trees; pictures by Helene Carter. Watts, 1951. 95p. $1.75 Gr.5-8

A beginners guide to trees. Full page drawings of the leaves, flowers, and fruit of 57 of the more common American trees, with small maps showing where most of these are found. The simply written text explains the how's and why's of trees' bark, buds, leaves, flowers, seeds, and roots. Excellent drawings add to the value of the book. A useful book for groups or individuals who are interested in tree identification.

Crane, Howard Rosen. Pitch pine tales; illus. by L.F. Bjorklund. Aladdin, 1951. 101p. $2 Gr.5-8

Twelve stories of pioneer and frontier life designed for reading aloud. Many of the stories are of familiar incidents in American history: Squanto's friendship with the Pilgrims, Sacajawea's aid to the Lewis and Clark Expedition, incidents from the Indian wars. The stories are brief but they could be used for reading aloud in classrooms or homes to stimulate an interest in history.

Cromden, Waugery. The sword with the golden hilt; illus. by William Soren. Caxton, 1950. 152p. $5 Gr.6-8

A slight story of two cousins who lived in Norway during the time of the Danish rule. The two boys prove their valor when they join the army that attempts to replace Olaf on the Norwegian throne. A well-written story but rather slight for the price. Illustrations are very poor and add nothing to the story.

Ferguson, Ruby. A stable for Jill; illus. by Cansey. Dodd, 1951. 152p. $2.50

Further adventures of Jill, heroine of A horse of her own, and her efforts to spend all her days on or near horses. A chance for her mother to make a speaking tour of America threatens Jill's happiness when she learns she must board her pony and spend her vacation with her cousin, Cecilia. Jill is hardly the perfect house guest—late for meals, scornful of her cousin's attempts to entertain her, and careless of her responsibility as a house guest. Her pleasant friendship with a minister's children who have several horses and she refuses to let the slightest sense of her responsibility as a house guest interfere with her pleasure. By telling the story the first person the author has employed the careless writing of a thirteen-year-old and has thereby been relieved of all responsibility for grammar and style. The result is only slightly above thirteen-year-old quality of writing. Not recommended.

Freer, Mariette (Mueller). Showcase for Diane. Messner, 1951. 176p. $2.50

A story of career plus marriage that employs all the cliches and stock characters of the typical career story plus some incredibly bad dialing that reads like a third-rate soap oper. Diane persuades her parents to let her forgo college and proceed at once on her career of designing window displays. A husband slightly complicates her plans but in a remarkably short time she has both husband and job under control. There is no reality to either the characters or the incidents. Not recommended.

Gard, Robert E. Midnight, rodeo champion; illus. by C.W. Anderson. Duell, 1951. 159p. $2.50 Gr.7-9

A horse story with a slightly different angle. Instead of being stolen—as usually happens in horse stories—Midnight is sold to the rodeo when its owner, Sandy, realizes that he is the perfect rodeo horse—good at bucking but not mean. Midnight becomes the champion bronco—the horse no one can ride. After many difficulties Sandy raises himself to the place where he is the champion bronco rider. The two meet again in Madison Square Garden in a ride that has a satisfactory ending for both the man and the horse. Superb illustrations by C.W. Anderson add greatly to the book's value.

Goudry, Alice E. The merry fiddlers; illus. by Bernard Garbutt. Aladdin, 1951. 45p. $1.75 trade; $2.25 library. Gr.2-4

As the little boy waited for the time when the crickets would sing his mother told him about their life and habits. Written in simple rhythmic prose that is excellent for reading aloud. This story of the life cycle of the cricket will make good nature study material for home, school, or camp. Nice illustrations.

Grimes, Robert L. Grandpa Toggle's wonderful book; a collection of stories; illus. by Beth Wilson. Caxton, 1951. 141p. $4.50

A collection of stories told by Grandpa Toggle to his grandson. The stories relate the doings—exciting, unusual, and sometimes amusing—of Grandpa Toggle and B Good, the small Negro boy who lives with him. These stories are of a tall-tale character and the reader gets the impression that B Good is as unreal as the magic saw handles or the itinerant toy mender and that he is introduced merely to provide amusement. This is a kind of stereotyping that is as unacceptable as the misuse of dialect or of supposedly "typical" characteristics and is more dangerous because it is more subtle. Not recommended.

Hale, Kathleen. Orlando's home life. Coward-McCann, 1951. Illus. $1.50

More adventures of Orlando, the marmalade cat. This time Orlando and his wife are having trouble with their children's education. This is less amusing than the first Orlando stories. The binding is in substantial and the story too slight to make the book worth pre-binding. Not recommended.

How, R. The friendly farm; illus. by John Moment. Coward-McCann, 1951. 212p. $2.50

Two English children spend their Easter holidays on a farm near London where they take part in all the farm activities, help a gypsy boy who is hiding from his father, and recover a lost colt. The story is slow-paced and written in a cozy tone that most readers will find annoying. Not recommended.

Jackson, Kathryn. A day at the beach; by Kathryn and Byron Jackson; pictures by Corinne Malvern. Simon and Schuster, 1951. 28p. (A little golden book) $.25
Simple account of the activities of two small children at the beach. The story which is told in inerior rhyme, is too slight and the illustrations too sentimental to have much appeal. Not recommended.

Jackson, Kathryn. Pantaloons; pictures by Leonard Welsagard. Simon and Schuster, 1951. 26p. (A little golden book) $2.25 K-Gr.2

Pantaloons is a poodle who loves bakeries and bakery goods. He tries to get a job with his favorite bakery but is looked on with suspicion until he can prove his worth. A slight but humorous story.

Justus, May. Lucky penny; illus. by Frederick T.
Chapman. Aladdin, 1951. 80p. $1.75 Gr.3-5

A slight story of the Tennessee Mountains that follows the usual Justus pattern. Jimmy Greer runs away from St Clevenger for whom he has been working and finds a real home with Davy Carr and his grandparents. Not outstanding but acceptable for Justus fans.

Kay, Helen. Apple pie for Lewis; illus. by Elizabeth
P. Korn. Aladdin, 1951. 45p. $1.75 trade; $2.25 library.

When Lewis visits his grandfather the time he looks forward to most of all is apple pie season. He watches the trees from the time they bloom until the apples are ripe and he even helps with the picking. A slight story marred by exceedingly ugly pictures. Not recommended.

Lanning, Elizabeth Carleton (Hubbard). The pony that ran away; illus. by Barbara Cooney. Crowell, 1951.
149p. $2 Gr.3-5

Amusing story of ten-year-old twins - brother and sister - and their birthday gift of a pony named Twinkle.
The story concerns their experiences in learning to care for the pony and their unsuccessful attempts to make him happy in his new home. Robby, their small brother, un-sittingly solves the problem of Twinkle's unhappiness when he talks baby talk to the pony. The only animal Robby can imitate is a duck and Twinkle is unhappy because his duck friend has been left behind. Large face type and the simple style make this suitable for third grade readers. Pleasant illustrations.

Lingenfelter, Mary Rebecca. Vocations for girls; by Mary Rebecca Lingenfelter and Harry Dexter Kitson.
Rev ed. Harcourt, 1951. 364p. $3 Gr.7-9

This brings the material up to date and adds some vocations that were not included in the first edition.
I very readable book that will have value for general library collections as well as for guidance counselors.

McQuire, Frances (Lynch). Wagon on a star; illus. by Gertrude Williamson. Caxton, 1951. 200p. $3

An adult's reminiscences of her childhood days on a Iowa farm. The author never makes her characters seem like real people and the overtones of sentimentality are too strong to appeal to most readers. There are some questionable values, such as, the time the father forces a man, at the point of a gun, to sell his farm and leave the country, instead of bringing a law suit as he should have done. Not recommended.

Mackay, Margaret. The poetic parrot; illus. by Kurt Wiese. Day, 1951. 98p. $2.50

Percy, a parrot in the Central Park Zoo, could talk in rhyme and spent most of his time insulting people.
One day he escaped from his cage and led the zoo keeper, fireman, ASPCA workers and others a merry chase.
Before he was captured he managed to get into a toy store and bring about the downfall of two robbers. The story would be amusing had the author not given Percy an unlimited vocabulary, an understanding of human speech, and a human reasoning ability. Not recommended.

Mason, Haven A. Rainbow gold; illus. by Helen Hughes
Wilson. Caxton, 1951. 299p. $3.50

A story of 16th century England and a farmer's dughter who finds a piece of gold at the end of a rainbow and with it dispels the power of witchcraft in her section of the country. The story is contrived, slow-moving, and unrealistic. Poorly illustrated. Not recommended.

MGM Cartoons. Tom and Jerry; story and pictures by MGM cartoons; pictures adapted by Don MacLaughlin and Harvey Eisenberg. Simon and Schuster, 1951.
26p. (A little golden book) $.25

Slight story of two mice and their adventures with a cat. The two mice may be funny as animated cartoon characters but here they only succeed in being dull.
Not recommended.

Millen, Nina. Off to Brazil; illus. by Janet Skalley.
Friendship pr., 1951. 127p. $2

An American family, en route from Detroit to São Paulo where the father has a job as a construction engineer, stop in several Brazilian cities on the way to see the sights and visit Protestant missionary schools and churches. The descriptions of Brazilian ways and customs are interesting but the whole is so tinged with missionary fervor as to be of little use to general collections. Could be used by church schools.

Nehru, Jawaharlal. The story of the world; a brief account of the early days of the earth as told in letters to his daughter in which he describes briefly the early days of the earth.
These are of more interest as Nehru's letters than for their content although they have an Indian point of view that will prove an interesting contrast to similar materials written from the English and American point of view.

Pukui, Mary Kawena, comp. The water of Kane and other legends of the Hawaiian Islands; col. and suggested by Mary Kawena Pukui; retold by Caroline Curtis; illus.
249p. Gr.3-7

Retellings of legends from the Hawaiian Islands.
These stories are more simply told than the ones in Colum's Legends of Hawaii (Yale University Press, 1937) with fewer proper names and clearer explanations. The format of the book is too textbookish to have much appeal but the tales should have value for the story-teller's collection.

Schlein, Miriam. A day at the playground; pictures by Eloise Wilkin. Simon and Schuster, 1951. 26p. (A
A picture book obviously intended to teach young children to share their playthings. The lesson is stated at the end of the story but is not brought out in the actions of the characters so its value is lost. Sentimental illustrations. Not recommended.

Smith, Theresa (Kalab). Poncho and the pink horse; story and pictures by Theresa Kalab Smith. Steck, 1951. 25p. $1.50

Poncho is a small Spanish-American boy who always looks sad when he is glad and glad when he is sad. One day he earns the right to ride on the pink horse on the merry-go-round and after that he looks glad when he is glad and sad when he is sad. The story seems to have been written for the pictures which are showy but static. Not recommended.

An acceptable version for those who like the Provensen's style of drawing. The art work seems rather sophisticated for the child like quality of Stevenson's verse but is otherwise acceptable.

The story of our time; encyclopedia yearbook, 1951.

Groller society, 1951. 452p. $10

Major events in science, government, education, the arts, entertainment, sports, and other fields of interest brought up to date - through 1950. Many of the events are reported in the words of persons who witnessed them or participated in them at the time they occurred. This gives the book its primary value. Coverage is spotty, the literature section being particularly weak. An interesting reference book but rather expensive for most collections.

Tracy, Ray Palmer. Fighting sheepman. Little, 1951. 207p. $1.75

Scott Lyman ran away from his uncle in Vermont after the latter had cheated him out of his inheritance. In Oregon he joined forces with Nick Barry, a sheep rancher, and helped Nick fight against two men who were trying to get control of the Barry ranch. There is little plot development - just one fight after another - and the implication that the best solution to problems is physical combat is a questionable value. Not recommended.

New edition of a story that has long been a favorite both as a fairy tale and as a doll story. Jyd Trewerry, a small Cornish girl, loves her doll until she loves it alive. Then the two set off on adventures that take them straight to fairyland.

Verne, Jules. Five weeks in a balloon; introd. by Norman and Madelyn Carlisle. Didier, 1951. 232p. illus. $2.25

A new edition of Verne's story of the balloon trip across Africa. Extremely poor format with crowded pages and a heavy black type that makes difficult reading. Not recommended.

William, Beryl. No pattern for love. Messner, 1951. 178p. $2.50

Another career story in which the vocational information is slighted and the emphasis is on quick success both in work and love. Tracy sets out to learn dress designing and to win the love of Steve Dovato. She divides her time and thought almost equally between the two for the major portion of the book. Then Jo Hunt appears on the scene and she realizes that he is her true love. In typical career book style she ends up with a job and Jo. The characters are all types, with no reality in either actions or speech. Not recommended.

Zarchy, Harry. Let's go camping; a guide to outdoor living; written and illus. by Harry Zarchy. Knopf, 1951. 178p. $3 Gr.5-7

A beginners guide to camping that starts with the basic principle that camping need not be rugged and uncomfortable to be fun. Includes directions for buying and using camp equipment, safety and sanitary measures, cooking suggestions, and recipes, and a brief introduction to edible plants. There is a good bibliography and index. A useful book for all beginning campers and easy enough for most fifth grade readers.

Instructional Materials, Supplementary Reading and Sources of Material.

Hurley, B. D. Children's books...for seventy-five cents or less. Association for Childhood Education International, 1200 Fifteenth Street, Washington 5, D. C. 1951. $.50

A useful collection for radio storytellers. The stories were selected and adapted for an actual radio program. The selection is excellent, with some less familiar stories included, and the adaptations have been carefully and skillfully handled. This is not a book for use in the general library collection since the complete stories are available in other sources and in more attractive form. There is a good, brief introduction on the art of radio-story-telling.
