TENTH ANNIVERSARY ISSUE

With this issue College and Research Libraries completes its tenth year. Founded as one of the first fruits of the reorganization of the Association after the deliberations of the Third Activities Committee, it ends this decade in the midst of renewed discussion of the place and function of our Association within the American Library Association. To the growth in numbers and in cohesion of the Association during this period the existence of our own periodical has contributed greatly.

The thanks of the Association of College and Reference Libraries are extended to all the persons who as contributors, as committee members, and as subscribers have aided in this undertaking. The Association appreciates especially the time and energy contributed by the successive editors, who have borne the chief responsibility and have earned the chief credit for its very real success.—Wyllis E. Wright, President, A.C.R.L.
