One Thousand 1960 Books for the Lower-Division College Library

By ROBERT C. JONES

This compilation of books published in 1960 is a continuation of similar lists for 1958 and 1959 of "750 Desirable Books" compiled by Robert T. Jordan.1 There are many problems in assembling a list of books of a single year in time for it to be fully useful and many problems in selecting books desirable for the majority of the undergraduate libraries. Outstanding among these difficulties is the fact that about the only item these libraries have in common is dissimilarity. Undergraduate libraries (these include two-year institutions, the junior colleges, and the community colleges) are different not only from state to state, but also from community to community. This is as it should be. Each institution and each library must serve its own needs, based upon the character of its enrollment, its curriculum, and the specific needs of its students, faculty, and community. The undergraduate years are the formative years, and the library must provide in breadth what it does not necessarily need in depth; however, the advanced student cannot be handicapped by a lack of advanced material. Increasing numbers of two-year college students now transfer to four-year colleges and universities, and they are more than holding their own academically with the native students of the institution. An undergraduate library low on quality and quantity of books is rendering a great disservice to the student and the community.

This 1960 list was increased to a thousand titles to make the total of the 1958-1960 lists twenty-five hundred. It leaves ample opportunity for individual libraries to build up special areas as required by the curriculum, but no list can substitute for effective librarian-faculty cooperation in book selection. Surely a minimum of twenty-five hundred acquisitions per year is necessary, and a total of twenty-five thousand volumes is probably minimal for an adequate library. Standard book selection aids have been used throughout the year to make these selections. Library of Congress card and classification numbers and prices for the titles are noted.

American Library Annual

In the new American Library and Book Trade Annual for 1961, it is noted that the total number of degrees granted in 1959 was 464,008; of these, 1,967 were in librarianship, making 1959 a peak year for qualifying librarians. In proportion to all degrees conferred the percentage of those in librarianship remained constant, for over the previous year there was an increase of 5.4 per cent in the graduating aggregate and this same increase was borne out by the library schools. Of the 1,967 library graduates the placement of 1,559 was analyzed as to salary highs and lows. Considered in relation to personnel in other fields,—the salaries of beginning librarians compares favorably. The average starting salary was given as $4,862. The record high was an exceptional $10,000, although a more usual high ran in the regions of a respectable $7,000. Possibly reflecting the current educational expansion, more graduates—a total of 418—went into college and university libraries, 280 into school libraries, 342 into municipal libraries, 230 into libraries of a specialized nature, and 77 into regional and county libraries.
