LIBRARIES AND UNIVERSITIES
Addresses and Reports by Paul Buck
Edited by Edwin E. Williams, with an introduction by Howard Mumford Jones

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the Harvard University Library today is that, in this largest university library, primary emphasis is placed upon a regard for the individual — an emphasis which extends alike to staff, faculty, students, and general users. As the library's director, Paul Buck was responsible for this attitude.

Analyzing the crucial challenges facing the university library — from its role in teaching and research to its relations with historians and businessmen, from the use of automation to Harvard's remarkably successful "library intern" plan — Paul Buck provides what is in effect a case history of how one major university library is meeting its responsibilities to its staff and its constituency.
