will buy a lot of microforms. Whether you're just beginning to convert your periodicals . . . reference sources . . . documents . . . or expanding and strengthening your collection.

And $4000 spent in the right place (at Microcard Editions)—at the right time (before June 30)—will get you a portable microfiche reader absolutely free!

Think of it as a reward for a wise investment. Because microform offers these advantages to the space and budget-conscious information specialist:

- obtain titles that are out of print in book form
- acquire inexpensive microform reprints of expensive books
- reduce storage costs by 95%
- reduce damage to scarce and rare books
- eliminate periodical binding costs

IF YOU BUY $4000 WORTH OF TITLES FROM MICROCARD EDITIONS BEFORE JUNE 30, WE'LL SEND YOU THE NCR 456-3 MICRO-FICHE READER—A $240 VALUE —FREE.

Send today for our free catalog—you'll find lots of practical and economical ideas on how to spend that $4000. Or better yet—call us collect at 303/771-2600 for answers to your questions or for further information on this special offer. And, if your library requires invoicing or order confirmation before a particular date (for budgetary reasons) a call to Microcard today will guarantee that invoices will reach you by your deadline.

Acquire a key to history with 18th & 19th century

American Periodicals.

Now you can have immediate access to extensive files of early American periodicals—and research early America in their informative and interesting pages right in your own library. These primary materials illuminate America's formative years, exposing literary, philosophical, and social patterns with the candor unique to magazine literature.

These microfilm collections currently encompass more than 900 American periodical titles from the 18th and 19th centuries, issued serially on subscription. Bound, full-size electrostatic copies of individual titles are also available.

All titles are filmed on 35mm roll microfilm. A printed guide to the collections gives bibliographic and descriptive information, and accompanies the microfilm. When micro-filming is completed, these collections will include more than 1,100 periodicals.

Xerox University Microfilms' early American periodicals series make it possible for your library to acquire important, difficult-to-obtain primary resources—with the dual economies of low cost and minimal storage requirements. Selective buying of titles makes it easy to acquire portions of the collections when budgets are limited.

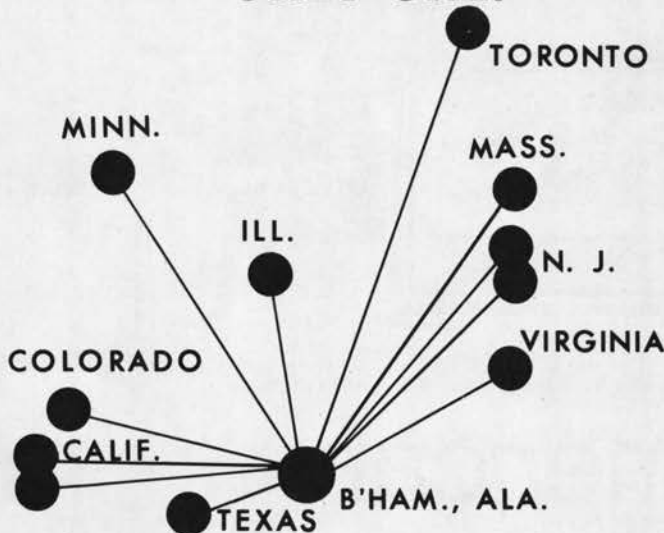

For further information, please write the Series Product Manager, Xerox University Microfilms, 300 North Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
