Recent Publications

Barr, Keith, and Line, Maurice, eds. Essays on Information and Libraries, reviewed by Marion A. Milczewski 275

Duckett, Kenneth W. Modern Manuscripts: A Practical Manual for Their Management, Care and Use, reviewed by Clyde C. Walton 276

Dunkin, Paul S. Bibliography: Tiger or Fat Cat? reviewed by C. Donald Cook 278

Cook, Margaret G. The New Library Key, 3d ed., reviewed by Mary W. George 278

Downs, Robert B., and Keller, Clara D. How to Do Library Research, 2d ed., reviewed by Mary W. George 278

Oluwasanmi, Edwina; McLean, Eva; and Zell, Hans. Publishing in Africa in the Seventies, reviewed by Hans E. Panofsky 280

Beeler, Richard J., ed. Evaluating Library Use Instruction, reviewed by Peter P. Olevnik 280

Foster, Donald L. Managing the Catalog Department, reviewed by Dorothy P. Ladd 281

Other Publications of Interest to Academic Librarians 282

BOOK REVIEWS

Donald Urquhart, for whom this festschrift was prepared, comes through in strong outline, if not full portrait, in the several contributions by his colleagues, principally, but not entirely British. It was fortunate that the editors had available, and chose as the first contributions, the doctoral honorary degree presentations from Heriot-Watt University, the University of Salford, and from the University of Sheffield, this last where he earned a doctorate in metallurgy in 1938. While most of his colleagues chose to write about his chief contributions which were the establishment, development, successful operation, and enlarge-plague us now, as they plagued his country.

In addition to a description of the solutions to provision of scientific literature quickly to those who need it, the festschrift contains some chapters not directly related to his endeavors, but as tribute offerings in his honor. Particularly useful to this reviewer were those of Donald Urquhart’s successor, M. B. Line, on “Demystification in Librarianship and Information Science,” and B. J. Enright’s “Bibliochlothanasia: Library Hygiene and the Library.”

Since a festschrift is a very personal kind of work, a review of it may be excused for being personal also, if only because the reviewer had the opportunity in 1964 with other ARL Board members to meet with Dr. Urquhart, and to have a personally conducted tour of the young NLLST and an explanation of its origins, its workings, and a glance into the future. The only regret remaining is that a continuing personal association could not have developed on that base. But Seattle is a transpolar flight from London and Boston Spa. A substitute in the form of reading, as they appeared, of most of Donald Urquhart’s library and information journal articles, is only second best to continuous dialogue with him.

One can only envy those individuals in the United Kingdom and his European colleagues who had the privilege of closer and more intimate professional association.

Having once been ill served by the publication of a book in poor format, this reviewer can comment on the poor format of this festschrift in honor of Donald Urquhart. The type face is so small that it takes some dedication to the task, or extreme interest in Donald Urquhart, to read the fine print and to turn the stiff pages. Yet it was worth the effort to work through to the end because the subject is worth that effort.—Marion A. Milczewski, Director of Libraries, University of Washington Libraries.

It is a pleasure to begin this review by saying that Ken Duckett has indeed written a very good book about manuscripts. As its title indicates, it is about modern manuscripts, and its “scope is limited to manuscripts of the seventeenth century to the present.” The preface points out that the book is a manual “directed toward the novice curator” and that “it is intended to serve as a practical guide, not as an exposition of theory.” The author is considerate in pointing out that his research terminated on January 1, 1974, and that he was, therefore, unable to include information which appeared after that date.

The book is organized so that after an introduction by William T. Alderson, the executive secretary of the American Association for State and Local History, and a preface by Duckett, the first chapter presents a “Survey of Manuscript Collecting.” It is followed by chapters on administration; acquisitions: the mechanics and ethics; physical care and conservation; establishing bibliographic control; information retrieval: automation, the computer, and microphotography; nonmanuscript material; use of collections; and public service. These nine chapters are followed by three appendixes, the first of which presents plans for a records center carton and for a flat-storage manuscript box; the second is a table of equivalents (cartons, Hollinger boxes and other containers, and their cubic-foot capacities; pages per box or per other container; carton and container weights; reduction ratios and reel/cassette viewing times); and the third is a perpetual calendar. These appendixes are followed by a “Directory,” which is a guide to associations, publications, equipment, supplies, and service; by “Facsimilies—a list of items more commonly reproduced”; and then by the notes, which are quite excellent. After the notes comes a “Glossary of Selected Terms,” then an extensive bibliography (twenty-five pages, with the items listed alphabetically by author). The volume concludes with an index.

The book is well written, accurate, and useful. Duckett’s suggestion that it is “directed toward the novice curator” is far too modest an appraisal. There is much here that will be of value to all curators, from the most experienced to the beginner, for while the beginner will get his start here,