Reorganized to reflect research trends

The material in RCD is arranged in 17 subject sections. In this edition several sections have been reorganized and tailed coverage of research trends. For example, the mathematics section is now more accurately entitled "Computers and Mathematics." Also the 17 sections have been combined into four groups of related fields: Life Sciences, Physical Sciences and Engineering, Private and Public Policy and Affairs, and Social and Cultural Studies.

Comprehensive indexing

Also new to the 10th edition is a more detailed and comprehensive index which lists workshops, seminars, conferences, projects, programs, affiliated centers, associations, consortia, and other related activities and organizations mentioned within the text of an entry. An additional convenience for the user is the inclusion of the see also listings for entries found in Government Research Directory.

Entries detail the subject covered, method of funding, size and location of the project, extent of the library, annual budget, publications, director's name, name of parent institution, address, phone number, librarian's name, size of staff, special facilities, and more.
