“I have the best job in the serials subscription business... because it offers so many opportunities for service to my library colleagues.

“I spent 16 years in an academic library where I experienced firsthand the complexities of serials management, the challenges of collection development and the great demands placed on academic librarians. At EBSCO I've found a significant way to put that experience to work for our customers.

“I'm an Account Services Manager, a position that's unique to EBSCO in the serials subscription business. It's my job to see that you get all the help you need from EBSCO to manage your serials responsibilities effectively. So I listen... I advise... and I solve problems.

“Like my counterparts in EBSCO Regional Offices across the country, I work with the other members of your serials support group—the EBSCO Sales Representative, General Manager and Customer Service Representative—to ensure that the routine aspects of your subscription program are handled promptly and efficiently. But I'm also available to help with the more sophisticated, non-routine needs you might have—like collection development reports, budget planning reports, inservice training seminars, reviews of services provided and of others available through EBSCO... whatever your special needs may be.”

Lee Ketcham, MLS
Account Services Manager

At EBSCO, we think librarians deserve qualified personnel who know and understand the challenges they face. Isn't that what you expect from a professional subscription agency?

a new quarterly journal

jobs today

Current developments concerning employment, particularly of the young, the elderly, women, and the disabled.

Subscription rate: $48.00 per year; $15 per issue.

In a land of plenty we have by the millions: disillusioned young people who never expect to hold jobs . . . bewildered seniors cast adrift by unwanted retirement . . . women, minorities, and handicapped victimized by job discrimination in many forms. Yet, millions of job openings go unfilled.

Jobs Today, just launched in 1989, is already on its way to making a number of dent in this vast problem.

In Issue No. 1, Youth, Jean K. Elder reports on great strides being made by Youth 2000, a project of the U.S. Office of Human Development Services whose goals are twofold: providing jobs for every qualified teenager . . . and making sure that millions of young people, currently "disconnected" from society, are qualified by the year 2000. Other articles discuss Wall Street, banking, the military and other fields, with practical guidance on preparing for—and getting—jobs in these areas.

College and non-college alternatives—using library resources in job hunting; résumés and interviews that land jobs; holiday employment as preparation for the real thing—all are typical of the 21 articles by experts on the firing line of youth employment.

Issue No. 2, Seniors, focuses on problems and opportunities of older workers. Retirees still rewarding full- or part-time jobs . . . seniors do not wish to retire . . . elderly people who work at home . . . and employers who are using the skills of workers with long experience. . . . all will find useful guidelines in these articles. Here it all is—from practical tips for w.r. résumés (functional, not chronologic); interviews, to detailed reports of employee methods other companies use to tap this valuable resource.

Cumulative index by general fields, projects, and by people, places, and organizations makes all material add up, issue by issue, unique encyclopedia of otherwise hard-to-find information.

Selected bibliographies identify major sources of detailed information on subjects dealt with in articles.

Coming issues will focus on employment problems and opportunities of women, minorities, capped, minorities, at-home entrepreneurs, disadvantaged people.

New Reference on British Literati
THE BLOOMSBURY ICONOGRAPHY
Edited by Elizabeth P. Richardson. Illus. 384 pages. Published by St. Paul's Bibliographies, Winchester, England, 1989. Distributed in North America exclusively by Omnigraphics. $84.00

This new index brings together and classifies printed portraits, sketches, and photos of Lytton Strachey, Virginia and Leonard Woolf, E. M. Forster, Roger Fry and Clive Bell, and others who made up London’s distinguished Bloomsbury people, places, and things relating to this famous group which flourished in the first third of the century at Bloomsbury Square, the center of London’s cultural activities.

This index to pictures of the group, their families, friends, and terrain will be a useful reference source for researchers in art, photography, crafts and decoration, social history, and bibliography. There are nearly 4,000 pictures from some 400 sources.

Phonames build goodwill faster than any other tool that costs so little
PHONAMES DICTIONARY
Introduction by Faith and Ross Eckler. 664 pages. Over 33,000 entries. $350.00

Many of your patrons may be passing up millions of dollars worth of free advertising, even your library may be missing out on a valuable goodwill device.

But you can now help end this waste with this unusual new Phonames Dictionary. Phonames are a tool you see at work everyday. Ads on radio and TV, in newspapers and magazines, on billboards, in the Yellow Pages, say . . . Dial BUTCHER for meat . . . For vacation planning, dial I-TRAVEL . . . For car care, call SERVICE . . . Burglary protection, dial 4-SAFETY . . . For a locksmith, call LOCKMAN.

Just ask the law firm that owns the phone number, 529-9377, how much they take for their combination that spells “LAWYER,” Ask Amtrak what value they put on the number they advertise nationwide: “Call 1-800-USA-RAIL.”

Of course, nobody gets such lucky numbers by luck. They require planning. To that end, Omnigraphics offers the world's largest directory that provides all the guidance one needs to create Phonames that create a company, institution, product, service, or idea.

Just open Phonames Dictionary and you'll see page after page of numbers: the WORDS they can spell on any telephone dial. Over 33,000 combinations. All together!

All items on 60-day approval.
10% discount on standing orders.
