

Two ways to get Full Text on FirstSearch

FirstSearch
A world of information online

Finding information about the article, the journal, or the book you need is just the first step. Now you can choose how to get the full-text items you and your patrons need—borrow from another library or buy from a document supplier.

FirstSearch and PRISM ILL are now linked.

This unique link allows patrons in OCLC member libraries to request material from another library, since most FirstSearch databases contain OCLC holding symbols. Patrons simply fill out online interlibrary loan requests for the items they need and send them to your library's ILL review file. You decide the best way to fill them. The ILL link is optional; you control it through the FirstSearch administrative module.

FirstSearch offers online document ordering.

From one online system, patrons can select a document supplier, compare delivery prices (something no other system offers), select a delivery method, and have the document sent right to their homes or offices. And they can use their credit cards to pay for the transaction. You also can set up a library account and have documents sent right to your library.

Now, with the ILL link and document ordering, FirstSearch offers more options to allow you to paint your own picture of library reference service.
