
About the Contributors

ETHEL AUSTER is a faculty member in the Faculty of Library & Information Science, University of Toronto where she teaches courses in administration and online information retrieval. She has published in numerous journals, and her recent books include Retrenchment in Canadian Academic Libraries (Canadian Library Association, 1991) and The Online Searcher (Neal-Schuman, 1990).

CHUN WEI CHOO is a faculty member in the Faculty of Library & Information Science, University of Toronto where he teaches courses in management and information retrieval. His research interests are in the use of information in organizations and information management. Recent publications include a chapter in ARIST, and articles in JASIS, LISR, and IP&M.

BLAISE CRONIN is Professor of Information Science and Dean of the School of Library and Information Science, Indiana University at Bloomington. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin (M.A.) and the Queens University of Belfast (Ph.D.). From 1985 to 1991 he held the Chair of Information Science at the University of Strathclyde and was also Head of the Department of Information Science. Dr. Cronin has published extensively in the areas of citation analysis, strategic information management, and information marketing. His books include The Citation Process, Elements of Information Management (with Elisabeth Davenport), and The Marketing of Library and Information Services 2 (Editor). Dr. Cronin has worked as a consultant, teacher, and researcher in more than thirty countries. His work has appeared in such journals as Journal of the American Society for Information Science, Journal of Documentation, European Journal of Marketing, Scientometrics, Libri and International Journal of Information Management.

ELISABETH DAVENPORT is Visiting Professor in the School of Library and Information Science, Indiana University at Bloomington. She has M.A. and M.Litt. degrees in Greek and English Literature from the University of Edinburgh, and a Ph.D in Information Science from the University of Strathclyde. Her work has appeared in the Journal of Documentation, Electronic and Optical Publishing Review, International Journal of Information Management, Journal of Information Science, Hypermedia, and Online Review. Dr. Davenport has been an invited speaker at conferences and colloquia in Mexico, Finland, Australia, Norway, Yugoslavia, and the United Kingdom. Her current research interests lie in the areas of electronic document delivery, network economics, and groupware.

BONNIE HOHHOF (B.A., Northwestern University, M.S., Rosary College) is a charter member of the Society of Competitive Intelligence Professionals (SCIP), is Founding and Executive Editor of the Competitive Intelligence Review, and has authored Competitive Information System Design (Glastonbury, CT: The Futures Group, 1994). She was responsible for developing internal and external intelligence sources at Motorola, Inc., where she also produced baseline competitive reports, intelligence bulletins, and newsletters covering industry trends, competitors, and market changes. At Ameritech, as Project Manager for Marketing Information Systems, she managed the design, development, and operation of a computer-based competitive information system. Through her consulting firm, Intelligent Information, she provides competitive information system support to large companies.

F. W. LANCASTER is Professor Emeritus in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and is Editor of Library Trends.

JANE LOESCHER has an M.S. in Library and Information Science from the University of Illinois, Graduate School of Library and Information Science in Urbana-Champaign. Ms. Loescher has a B.A. in biological sciences from the University of Delaware. She co-authored the article in this issue of Library Trends while a master's student at the University of Illinois.

JERRY P. MILLER, an assistant professor in the graduate school at Simmons College, teaches courses in competitive intelligence, the management of information technology, and ethics. He is a member of the Boston chapter of the Society of Competitive Intelligence Professionals (SCIP), on the editorial board of SCIP's Competitive

Intelligence Review, and will work with SCIP at the national level on developing the educational requirements for intelligence professionals. Mr. Miller has presented papers on the educational requirements for information professionals at the conferences of the Association for Computing Machinery and the Northeast Decision Sciences Institute.

THOMAS D. WALKER is Assistant Professor at the School of Library and Information Science at the University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee. He received degrees in library and information science from the University of Chicago (M.A.) and the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (Ph.D.). With research interests in bibliography and library history, Mr. Walker teaches courses about reference sources and services, government information, and information science. He has published articles about library historiography, research methods, library education, and the history of scholarship and has contributed to encyclopedias of music bibliography and library history. He is currently editing Adalbert Blumenschein's "Beschreibung verschiedener Bibliotheken in Europa," an eighteenth-century manuscript account of about 2,500 European libraries.

This Page Intentionally Left Blank