
About the Contributors

KARIN BEGG BOREI was Director of the Library at Trinity College of Vermont in Burlington when her article was written. She has held positions at Boston University, the University of Virginia, and the University of Pennsylvania and, at Boston College, positions in general management as well as in cataloging, circulation, and systems. Ms. Borei has also held national and regional offices in ACRL, LITA and LAMA and has credit for numerous publications and presentations.

LINDA S. DOBB is the Interim Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at Bowling Green State University in Ohio. She is former Dean of Libraries and Learning Resources at Bowling Green State University. She is the author of articles on revenue generation, copyright, library automated systems, and technostress, and co-author with Patricia Dick of the American Library Association publication Human Resource Management for Small Libraries. Ms. Dobb was also co-author with Janice Kirkland of the article "The Retreat as a Response to Change" in the Spring 1989 issue of Library Trends.

MICHAEL GORMAN is Dean of Library Services, California State University, Fresno. He is perhaps best known as the editor of AACR2. He lectures widely and has published many books and articles; two of Mr. Gorman's most recent titles are Future Libraries: Dreams, Madness, and Reality (1995) with Walt Crawford, and Our Singular Strengths: Meditations for Librarians (1997).

JANICE J. KIRKLAND is Women's Studies Coordinator in the Walter Stiern Library, California State University, Bakersfield. She edited the spring 1989 issue of Library Trends on the human response to library technology and has published articles on gender discrimination in libraries and on literary topics.

SUZANNE HILDENBRAND teaches cataloging and online bibliographic retrieval in the School of Information and Library Studies, State University of New York at Buffalo. She received her doctorate from the University of California, Berkeley. Recent publications include Reclaiming the American Library Past: Writing the Women In (1996), "International Library Women" in Libraries: Global Reach, Local Touch (1998), and "Still Not Equal: Closing the Library Gender Gap" in Library Journal (1997).

GERTRUDE HIMMELFARB is Professor Emeritus of History, Graduate School, City University of New York. She has written extensively on intellectual and social history with emphasis on Victorian England. Her most recent interests are in contemporary society and culture. In retirement and now resident in Washington, DC, Professor Himmelfarb continues to write and lecture. She serves on the Council of Scholars of the Library of Congress, the Council of Academic Advisors of the American Enterprise Institute, and other academic and public service boards. In 1991 she delivered the Jefferson Lecture in the Humanities under the auspices of the National Endowment for the Humanities and in 1997 received the Templeton Foundation Award.

DOROTHY E. JONES is a faculty member at Northern Illinois University Libraries where she is a reference librarian and Coordinator of Library Services for Persons with Disabilities. Her publications are primarily in the areas of library personnel issues and library services for students with disabilities. She is also an accomplished musician, teaches music, and publishes in that field. Her article "Library Support Staff and Technology" appeared in the Library Trends spring 1989 issue.

F. W. LANCASTER, editor of Library Trends and Professor Emeritus of Library and Information Science at the University of Illinois, has been working in or around libraries for almost fifty years. He is author or co-author of eleven books, several of which have earned prestigious national awards, and editor or co-editor of twelve others. He has lectured at more than seventy universities or colleges in sixteen countries.

VIRGINIA MASSEY-BURZIO is head of the Resource Services Department at the Milton S. Eisenhower Library at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. She is the creator of the Brandeis model, and her primary interests are in the role of the librarian, reference service, and user experiences with library services and technology. Ms. Massey-Burzio is the author of several articles on these topics; her most recent was "From the Other Side of the Reference Desk" in the Journal of Academic Librarianship.

DONALD E. RIGGS, Vice President for Information Services and University Librarian, Nova Southeastern University, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, was formerly Dean of Libraries at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and Arizona State University, Tempe. He is current editor of College & Research Libraries and former editor of Library Administration & Management and Library Hi Tech. He received the 1991 Hugh Atkinson Award for risk taking and innovation in library technology.

LAVERNA M. SAUNDERS is Dean of the Library, Instructional and Learning Support at Salem State College, Salem, Massachusetts. She has edited three books on the evolution of the virtual library. She is also the Internet Librarian section editor for Computers in Libraries and has spoken at professional conferences on such topics as the virtual library and ethics in cyberspace.

WENDY M. STARKWEATHER is Director of Public Services, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, Libraries and has held public service positions in special, public, and academic libraries. She presently chairs the Nevada State Council on Libraries and Literacy. Throughout her career, she has emphasized the user service imperative, especially relating to emerging information technologies and focusing most recently on dynamically changing services to faculty and students of university libraries.

CAMILLE CLARK WALLIN, former Director of Library Systems, University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV) Libraries, has returned to the public services arena as a librarian at the Las Vegas-Clark County Library District. She held a number of positions with UNLV Libraries after joining the faculty in 1986 and has also worked in government and corporate libraries. Ms. Wallin enjoys helping library patrons use new technologies to find information and is interested in issues related to recruitment to the library profession.

DAVID S. ZEIDBERG is Avery Director of The Huntington Library, San Marino, California. He has been rare books librarian at Syracuse University, curator of special collections at George Washington University, and head of special collections at UCLA. He has written on such topics as teaching using primary resources and the future of special collections libraries in the age of technology. He is the editor of a recent essay collection Aldus Manutius and Renaissance Culture (1998).

SHA LI ZHANG is collection management librarian at the University of South Carolina–Spartansburg. She has translated several publications from Chinese to English and vice versa, including Jesse Shera's Introduction to Library Science. Ms. Zhang is a member of the ACRL copyright committee, the College & Research Libraries editorial board, and chairs the Chinese American Librarians' constitution committee.

YIN ZHANG is a doctoral candidate in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. She is interested in information use and information-seeking behavior in the electronic environment, citation analysis, and scholarly communication. Her recent publications include "The Impact of Internet-Based Electronic Resources on Formal Scholarly Communication in Library and Information Science" in Journal of Information Science.